

Objectives

To enable teachers in Classics all over Europe to exploit the ICT resources available for their teaching of Ancient Greek and/or Latin and/or Classical Civilisation and to help create a new learning environment for Classics with ICT. Basic skills will be trained along with more advanced exercises and the new pedagogical approaches and teaching styles enabled by ICT will be addressed.

Methodology

Various topics from the CIRCE manual will be presented and followed up by workshops using computers to train a range of skills and point out the resources available for Classics (different kinds of software, internet resources, various databases, electronic dictionaries etc.). All will be put into a pedagogical and didactic frame. The 2012 course will feature several new sessions, with a consideration of emerging internet technologies and so-called blended learning techniques, as we continue to assess developing media.

Preparation

The participants will be asked to fill in a questionnaire about their professional background. Furthermore the participants will have access to the CIRCE manual on teaching Classics with ICT as well as to the resources on the CIRCE web site www.circe.eu. Hands-on training materials will be given out during the course.

Follow-up

The course organisers will provide a Yahoo! Group for the participants to discuss the in-service training before it has begun and after it has ended to further exchange experiences and materials.

Venue

The course will be organised in Fano, a small seaside town on the Adriatic coast of Italy. In Roman times it was called Fanum Fortunae and was an important stop on the Via Flaminia. The course will take place in the Istituto Alessandro Volta, a technical secondary school not far from the hotels.

Participants will be staying in en-suite rooms in two seaside hotels in Fano, within walking distance of the school and the city centre.

Address

Istituto Alessandro Volta
Via Caduti del Mare, 24
61032 FANO, ITALY

Course certificate

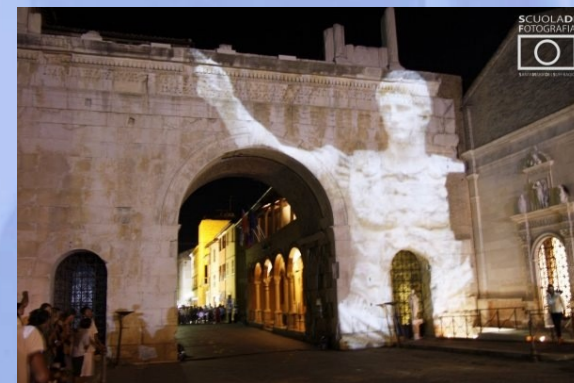

The course organisers will provide a certificate of attendance indicating the nature of the course, its length and the partner institutions involved.
